will want half down and half before the female leaves. It is really an individual preference. I think it is a good idea to have part of the stud fee non-refundable. For instance, if you have a female with a breeding problem and you can't get her bred, you still have spent time and money working to try to breed her.

Board. Most breeders will give you a set amount of time of free board. Usually that time should include time to breed and make sure your female is out at least 21 days. But I have known some people to leave their llama at the breeders for months and if this is the case, board should be charged for the care of the llama.

Veterinary Expenses. We all hope we don't have to deal with these. But they do come up. I have to drive over an hour to my vet so I charge a vet trip fee plus the actual vet expenses. I always check with the llama owner to see if it is ok to have their female go to my vet. As the female owner, be sure to have your female sheared and nails trimmed. Don't expect the herdsire owner to do this unless you have talked to them previously.

Care of Female. The female that comes to you for breeding needs to have the same care or better than your llamas. Some people have special paddocks or pastures to keep visiting females. The females visiting you should be kept up on your worming schedule, get the same treatment as the other females on the farm. If they have an accompanying cria, that cria will need care too.

Breeding Contract for Argentine Stud

Lynda Carothers, owner of Argentine Stud, hereinafter referred to as "stud owner" and _____ hereinafter referred to "female owner" make this contract _____ day of _____, 20__.

Name of Female Owner _____

Address _____

Phone _____ Email _____

Name of Female Llama _____ Registration # _____

1. Argentine Stud's stud fee is _____. The female owner agrees to pay the stud owner this stud fee. This fee is due on or before the arrival of the female on the stud owner's premises. $_____ is considered to be the deposit amount and is due at the signing of this agreement.
2. A charge of $2.00 a day will be paid for each day over the forty-five days the female is boarded and is payable when the animal leaves the sire owner's premises. There is no boarding fee for an accompanying cria.
3. The stud owners are authorized to arrange any veterinary services and treatment, which are necessary in the stud owner's judgement, and the female owner will be responsible for the costs of such services to the female and/or cria.
4. The stud owners will provide the female and cria with the same level of care as their own llamas. In no event shall the stud owners be held responsible for any loss, theft, or death of the female llama or cria.
5. It is not the intent of the stud owners to provide breeding service to females which have any history or difficulty in conceiving or maintaining a pregnancy. If, in spite of the best efforts of the stud owners, the female does not conceive or maintain a pregnancy, the female owner shall be responsible only for the deposit and any veterinary expenses.
6. This contract is not transferable. In the event the female llama is sold, any unpaid fee of expenses incurred becomes immediately due and payable. Any return breeding or refund is not transferable to a new owner without prior written authorization of the stud owners.
7. In the event Argentine Stud dies, is sold, or becomes unfit for service, or if the female dies, this contract shall become void.
8. The stud owners guarantee a live birth and ninety-six-hour survival of the baby born from this breeding. Liability of the stud owners is limited to a free re-breeding of the female or another female mutually agreed upon or a refund of the fee at the stud owner's option. This breeding guarantee is void if death is due to accident or to negligence on part of the female owner or caretaker.
9. The female owners will transport the female to and from the stud owner's premises. The female will be halter trained and up to date on worming and vaccinations.
10. The female owner agrees to indemnify and holds the stud owners, harmless from any liability of any kind and to release the stud owners, their successors or assigns, their agents and employees from any and all claims, demands, and causes of actions, whatever kind of nature in connection with the care and/or control of the female llamas and/or cria while at the premises of the stud owners. The stud owners shall not be liable for injury, death or disability of the female llama and/or cria while at the stud owner's premises.

It is important to keep a close eye on visiting cria's. As sometimes change can be hard on them and their moms.

Problem Females. This does happen. Many times the female owner has no idea that there is a problem. As the herdsire owner you have to decide how much time and energy you can put into getting a female bred. We have had females here with problems. I have taken them to the vet and worked on getting them able to breed. Some finally get bred, but others haven't. Our rule here is that if you breed a female 4 times and she isn't bred, we stop and say she needs to be seen by a vet, something is up. At the time the female owner decided to have her checked out or to come and get her.

Transferability: This has to do with selling of one of the llamas in the contract. We usually like to have a contract with the new owner also. If the female is bred and the owner sells her we do not transfer the live birth guarantee to the new owner unless we have a new contract with the new owner.

Animal is Sold: If you have a contract with the owner of a female and something happens to that female, we usually will take a different female to replace the one that is on the contract. If that is not an option the stud fee is refunded. If the female or male dies, the contract is voided.

Live Birth Guarantee: This is done many different ways. We typically want to make sure the baby is born alive and is healthy.
